A Man's Appeal To Women

The appeal in your last issue from a Woman to Women calls for reply and as one of those who are apparently unable to look after themselves I venture to enter the lists

In the first paragraph, women are urged to get their names on the Voter's Lists and this is the only part of the article which deserves whole hearted support. The vote being given to all adults it is everyone's duty to use it

How many women who to quote "Have had their homes wrecked etc" are themselves entirely to blame, how many men use drink to excess if their wives keep a comfortable home? If a man is a drunkard before marriage the woman has only herself to thank if she does not have a good home she should not have married him, does a woman ever stop to think how many men take to the excessive use of drink after marriage and then look into matters, if she does in nine cases out of ten she will find it is because the home is not what it should be. mind I am not making an excuse for the men, how many mothers train their daughters for the highest of all callings wifehood and motherhood? How often do we hear the remark "When I was first married I knew nothing of about house work and how to keep a home"

Rather than wall about the evils of drink, it might be better employed in endeavouring to get the education of their daughters more along the lines of old when the highest ideal of woman was to become a happy and capable companion for man and one who would be able to make a real home

Women must remember that the majority of men are by no means in favour of the present state of affairs, they do not wish to have the open bars back, they have no great desire for whisky to be placed in the hands of public ad. lib. but what they do say is that good beer does no one any harm and further while it not only gives pleasure it is a real food. Further there is a certain class of man who I am sorry to say drinks to excess and no Prohibition will prevent him. If the temperance party carry the coming election the result will be bootlegging on a larger scale than ever and that terrible evil "The illicit still" will be in our midst again. Place good beer in the hands of the people and educate them how to use it, keep the profit from its manufacture and sale in the hands of the Government and then the traffic will do no one any harm.

Women must remember that it will be a terrible thing for society if the day should ever arrive when men and women are divided in their opinions on great questions of the day. Let each one be on equal footing, each capable of judging questions on their merits without bringing in the idea that men vote one way and women the other.

Women! before the day arrives consider the matter from all points of view and allow no one to influence you. Which do you want? Good beer and a happy home for both you and your mankind, or bootlegging, illicit stills, Law breaking, and all that it entails.

Woman! Man's appeal to you is this You have been given the vote which is your right, and which man is proud you have. Consider it to be a sacred duty to use it, but forget in doing so all the screams and cries of your hysterical sisters and temperance cranks also those of the great drink interests and before voting decide for yourself between the questions and Vote the way which will give the greatest content and well being for the great Dominion in which we live.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. that was formed here last week, should prove of great benefit to the community, giving it that softening and refining touch so greatly appreciated by all really nice people.

It was a great pleasure to the town to have, Mrs. G. Calder, Mrs. E. Anderson, Mrs. J. Brown and Mrs. Rushworth elected as Officers.

The second and third Saturdays in the month have been chosen as the Ladies Meeting days in the G.W.V.A. Club Room. It is hoped that other Ladies will join.

The G.W.V.A. are having a nice Dance Hall made next to their Club Room, the Carpenters hope to make a nice job of it and are working so that the Hall will, it is hoped, soon be open for Dancing.

We would suggest that they take over the premises next door, now occupied by the Chinese Laundry, and thus do away with the smell of the Washing. Because when a young lady and her escort get warm with Dancing and are then regaled with the softly crowing odours of Washing, well, it is hardly what they expect or would desire.

The 20th. September being Thanksgiving Day in the Rebekah Lodge, they have decided to attend Divine Service at the United Church next Sunday the 19th.

All Rebekahs and friends are earnestly invited.

We noticed Customs Officer Kerkham from Burdett in Bow Island last Wednesday he apparently had blood in his eye and meant taking possession of goods on behalf of His Majesty.

Services will be held next Sunday the 19th. September, at 8 p.m. The Rebekahs, will attend Sunday the 20th. September will be "RALLY SUNDAY"

Mrs. McLane is renting Brophy's Store Building next to Thompson's Meat Market. Mrs. McLane expects to open about the 15th. September as a Millinery Store.

Mr. Ware our new School Principal seems to take to his duties well and is earnest, painstaking and convincing in his work, and gaining the confidence and respect of both the scholars and their parents.

Everything points to most successful school-work being accomplished under the able guidance of Mr. Ware.

Bulletin from the Prohibition Headquarters Edmonton

The Announcement of a registration of all voters in towns (over 1000 population) and cities in Alberta has acted as a jangle call to the temperance forces throughout the Provinces. They are now awake and active everywhere. Even from points that were formerly the despair of organizers come such communications as this:

"We have formed a strong Committee here and will have our first meeting this week. Our first object will be to see that every citizen who will vote dry will have his or her name registered in his good time."

The ladies are especially active. By means of Public Meetings and personal canvass they are preparing to get every woman who is entitled to vote and is sympathetic to prohibition, out for registration. Mr. Hall, Provincial Organizer is now making a tour of Southern Alberta and will complete the organization of that part of the Province. He has with him as team mate, Mr. B. Arthur Barton, an ex-actor and entertainer well known throughout the West. Mr. Barton never fails to grip and arouse his audience with his program of reading and impersonations, and his forcible prohibition address. "He makes one feel" says a correspondent, "what it is a privilege and an honor to be on the side of Prohibition."

A Conference of all organizers in the South was held in Calgary on Friday September 10th. to plan the rest of the campaign; both Mr. Hull and Mr. Bishop being present. Another one will be held, a week later for the north. Two ladies, specialists in organizing women's work, will be on the job by Sept. 13th. and will do much toward speeding up and perfecting this important work of the prohibition organization.

We will be able to announce next week a list of outstanding speakers who will be routed throughout the Province during the rest of the Campaign.

A.C. Bryan, Campaign Secretary.

Transforming the Prairie Farms By The Planting of Trees

Mr. J. B. Mueselman, in the Regina Leader, contributes the following article on the subject of the work of the Canadian Forestry Association. The inestimable value of a little work on tree plantation on the prairies is very clearly shown. Mr. Mueselman says:

It was difficult to conceive of a better work in the permanent best interests of the people of Saskatchewan than that which is carried on by the Canadian Forestry Association through the medium of its "Tree Planting Car." Its car, No. 11, is now touring Saskatchewan and it is gratifying to note that at all stations visited, farmers in goodly numbers have been in attendance to hear the lectures, to discuss with the experts their local tree planting problems and generally to secure information on the subject of trees and shrubbery on the plains. The car has a list of visit a large number of points, a staff of which, together with dates, is appended hereto.

A good grove of trees and well placed shrubbery about a farm home constitutes an excellent barrier against investment in any country. On the semi-arid and treeless plains of Saskatchewan, their value is almost beyond compute. On the prairie, where money cost trees constitute a more profitable investment than elaborate buildings.

During a recent extensive tour trip with a party of eastern tourists through a prosperous section of central Saskatchewan, the visitors were deeply impressed with the barrenness and soullessness of home after home with well designed and costly houses stand in all their attractive nakedness on the open treeless prairie without hedge or shrub and lacking that absolute essential to a pleasing picture of a human habitation—a green background of trees. On the other hand, when a farm house was passed which was surrounded by a shelter belt or had on its north side a substantial grove of trees, exclamations of delight were heard from all, quite without regard as to whether or not the house itself was small and unpicturesque.

All the farms are sure to come upon the market at some time. A well-treed homestead makes a powerful appeal to the true farmer, who is looking for a home as well as an investment.

Nature has done so much for us on these great fertile western plains that it seems but just that we should do a little in co-operation with her to add beauty and charm to the landscape. We destroy the green and soft brown of the prairies for our own profit, substituting for these the colorless summering wastes of the glaring wheat stubble. In doing so we are robbing ourselves and posterity of those invaluable eye-resting colors which nature provided.

Man is largely a machine built around an organ of sight. More than half the nervous energy generated by him is expended in seeing—so-called eyes. Nearly all that we know we imbibe through this sense and our characters are formed and our desires fixed largely by what we see. It is not good for our highest ethical development that the housewife on the farm should look only into glaring sunlight each time she goes out of her kitchen window or that her little ones should lack shade of trees for their playground. It is not good for the building character of our children that they should grow up in homes with unattractive surroundings. Be the house ever so small, if neat and clean, with a garden, a lawn, a hedge, a few flowers, and a good grove of trees, it affords a better environment for the child to grow up in than does the finest farm house in the province if these be wanting.

The excessively bright sunlight and the extraordinary amount of it which in some regards is such a disadvantage to the farmer, and also the main or a contributory cause of very many ailments. Eyestrain is responsible for many derangements of the physical organism. Many a sensitive woman on these treeless plains has broken down physically from a constant exposure to the sun, whose tired eyes and nerves overstrained by the sun's unbroke glare the soft green of a caragana hedge and the purple and pink of a row of poplar trees would have been an untold blessing.

The restless sturdiness of the treeless prairie makes the farmer who has no shelter belt or whose trees are few and far between play a devil's tattoo on the lacerated nerves of many a prairie mother for whom no greater boon could be provided than a good shelter belt with the soft soothing of the winds through leaf and poplar and the song of the birds as they mate and nest in their shady recesses. No farmer is getting the best out of life or doing the best by his family who continues to live in a treeless home.

On the homestead where the "tree" lives only in the name, his present work is a grove of around four thousand trees, nearly all of which were planted by his own hands. The work was really insignificant compared with results.

There are rows of maple and caragana grown where they stand from and planted as simply as rows of corn and there are willows from cuttings plowed under like potatoes. The poplar, cottonwood, and aspen are, of course, from seedlings planted with greater care and supplied free from the Dominion Forestry Department by Indian Head.

Though the homestead has long since become the property of another, these trees have repaid the farmer in a hundred times. His full satisfaction, however, is a knowledge that the grove will offer its blessings to every succeeding generation of little ones whose restless feet may tread beneath its leafy boughs or whose tumbled heads will build castles in the air while playing in its sylvan shades.

What a revolution could be effected in the landscape of this country and in the attachment of her citizens to their homes, if every farmer would each year plant at least a few trees.

"The Little Potsdam"

Name Given By Dutch Newspapers

To Kaiser's Home
The former German Emperor, William, while professing a desire to lead at Doorn the quiet life of a country gentleman, has, nevertheless, created a little court around him—somewhat larger than that which he had at Amerongen, and Dutch newspapers have already begun calling Doorn "The Little Potsdam."

The Allies' demands upon Holland to guard the former emperor closely have made it impossible for William to mingle with the Dutch country gentlemen who have estates about Doorn and the house where he is said to expect to spend his remaining days is just like a little bit of Germany.

Strict military order prevails outside the House of Doorn, where servants must not be too curious. Within, the discipline is Prussian. William's only associates are German. His entire staff, including approximately 40 servants, are German, with one exception—the village barber, a Dutchman, is called in now and then to trim his hair or beard.

When at Amerongen, William went frequently to Doorn by automobile, but now he seldom sees outside the wire fence of his estate, which villagers call his "40-hectare cage." Forty hectares are about 80 acres. The few times he has been seen, he has paid visits to his former host, Count Benck, at Amerongen. Now and then the former crown prince or others of William's sons have been permitted to visit the exile, largely because of the illness of their mother, but from day to day, William seldom sees any new faces—only his daily associates.

No "Coronet" For Him.
Once Sir Thomas Lipton in a business deal came into possession of a large quantity of wheat. He was advised to join with others in cornering the market and forcing up the price. He refused, saying that no gentleman would tamper with necessities of the poor. No wonder the world has acclaimed him as a "good sport."—Hamilton Herald.

Crop Rotation

Dr. Grisdale Emphasizes this Necessary Factor of Permanency in Prosperous Agriculture

"The maintaining of the farm in a condition free from weeds and keeping the moisture-holding power of the land as high as possible are factors that are of prime importance. A crop rotation, therefore, that is satisfactory makes preparations both by getting the soil in right shape and by cultural methods to hold that moisture as well as it possibly can be held, by storing all the moisture that comes along."

"Another advantage in crop rotation is the conservation of the fertility and the maintenance, if not the increasing, of the food content of the soil."

"Nearly all farmers are following rotations. They get into the habit of following some kind of a system, and if you are handling some land year after year you are bound to have some kind of a scheme worked out. Unfortunately we have too many farmers with a bad scheme—a bad rotation. What we want to get introduced on every farm is a good rotation, and what is a good rotation on one farm is not necessarily the best rotation on another. That we appreciate this is shown by the fact that we have on trial on our experimental farms some twenty-odd rotations in the West."

"I think the most important step in progression to be made on these prairies is the introduction of a better rotation. We have a rotation now, but it is a bad one. What we want to do is to change it and put a better one in, and that is what we are trying to reach at this Conservation meeting. If we could get that changed—if we could get the farmers of this country thinking along that line, the changing from that three-year rotation in the West to four-year in the eastern part of these prairies, including a summerfallow in each case, and considering all the possibilities of our hood or cultivated crop, we shall have done more for agriculture in these provinces than any other convention or meeting of men has ever done in the history of the prairies."—From address of Dr. J. H. Grisdale, at Conservation meeting of the Dominion Commission of Conservation at Winnipeg.

Agricultural Wealth Of the Dominion is Making Rapid Increase

The gross value of the agricultural wealth of Canada in the year 1919 has been estimated by the Government at $7,379,299,000, and is arrived at in the following manner. The total estimated agricultural production for the year is $1,075,841,000. From carefully compiled statistics, the value of farm land throughout the Dominion is computed at $2,792,299,000; buildings at $1,974,480,000; implements at $187,079,000; and farm live stock at $1,296,602,000. All these items are added to the annual agricultural production and the result is the Dominion's gross agricultural wealth.

That agricultural wealth is increasing every year is obvious from the fact that each year sees an increased settlement and new areas made productive, with a consequent augmentation in crop production. With the settling of new territories, the penetration of railroads, the other advantages which follow in its wake, land naturally increases in value, numerous farm buildings spring up, farm stock is introduced on a larger scale, and more agricultural implements are needed and utilized.

This gross agricultural wealth all hinges on increased settlement and production. That settlement is extending three can, of course, be no gainsaying with the ever expanding area of cultivated land, the opening of new sections, and the flood of immigrants from all sides.

The progress of agricultural wealth and production, in spite of the years of war, has been both steady and substantial. Agriculture is the Dominion's premier industry, and for years to come, if not for all time, the major portion of her revenue will cover from the countless farms which cover her domain. In 1915 the total value of farm crops and products in Canada was $1,118,694,000, while for the year 1919 this had increased by $1,974,480,000. The increase in the past five years is gratifying, and must inevitably continue as the vast rich areas of the west are peopled and rendered productive.

Potato Mills to Be Established

Mills in Manitoba Will Manufacture Potato Flour.

A series of potato flour mills have been planned for Manitoba and the other western provinces by a well-known farm scientist and farmer. The first unit in the series of mills is stated to be already well on the way towards establishment. It will be built at Melita, Manitoba, which is known to have a soil particularly adapted to the production of meaty varieties of potatoes—those which make good potato flour.

There is a confident outlook for the success of the potato flour industry. Not only is the potato flour itself an economical and popular commercial product, but there are valuable by-products, such as starch and alcohol. Even the residue makes good stock food.

Flowers of the lime tree yield much honey.

Flying Torpedoes Next War Horror

Bombing Planes Can Be Guided By Hertzian Waves

The Montreal Gazette publishes the following from Paris: "Flying torpedoes directed by Hertzian waves would be used if a new war broke out tomorrow," says an aviation expert in the Petit Journal. The writer declares that the latest experiments of the French navy have shown that a fleet of five or six small and inexpensive bombing planes without a pilot or mechanic, can be successfully guided by a shore-based in a large plane by means of the Hertzian waves.

"Already during the last year of the war, the Dutchman, Fokker, had received an order for a special apparatus from the German War Office. Neither he nor the French had then developed the machine to a practical point, but in the winter of the same year, just after the armistice, the Voisin firm conducted a series of experiments at the aerodrome at Crotoy. The flying torpedo was then too large and swift for its shepherd. During the first half-hour of its movement, obediently, but finally got too far away for control and fell into the sea. Comparing this result with the present achievement of having a flock of little planes under perfect control, the writer prophesies that within a year or two it will be possible to launch a submarine torpedo from a land base to a distance of a hundred miles or more."

It Was A Dry Year

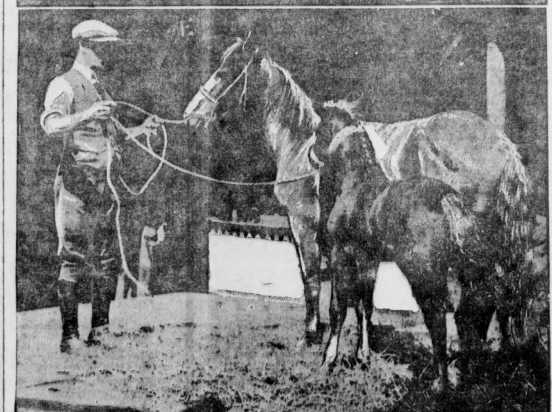

Rainfall Was Just Half the Amount That Fell in 1918

That this summer has been one of the driest on record is evident from reports recently issued from the Dominion Meteorological office. July especially was exceptionally dry, the rainfall recorded during that month being only 0.76, in comparison with a rainfall of 1.83 during July, 1918. This was the driest July on record, the recorder said.

It is a rather remarkable fact that the rainfall during the summer months this year is exactly half the amount of 1919. Rainfall, during June, July and August, 1919, amounted to 11.63, while that of the summer months this year was 5.96, which multiplied by two, gives the result of 11.92, the amount of rain that fell at exhibited at the Dominion Meteorological office in the Grain Exchange, as follows: June, 1919, 4.95; June, 1920, 4.50; July, 1919, 1.83; July, 1920, 1.70.

While, the dryness of the atmosphere added to the effect of the drought, this year was really cooler, on the average than last. Average temperatures for both June and July were less than for the same months last year, although August was slightly hotter. Average temperatures for the three months are as follows: June, 1919, 67.6; June, 1920, 63.8; July, 1919, 68.4; July, 1920, 66.1; August, 1919, 64.3; August, 1920, 67.1. A little calculation reveals the fact that the average summer temperature for 1919 was 66.6, while that of 1920 was only 65.6.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Vandals on Battleground

Tourists Desecrate France's Most Glorious Tomb

Stories of vandalism by tourists on the French battlefields are still coming into Paris. Unscrupulous souvenir hunters have undermined at Verdun the famous "trench of the bayonets," a spot where the tips of bayonets disclose the tragedy of a mass explosion, where a company of French infantry were buried alive when standing upright in a trench. Another trench had been dug at night alongside the place where the bayonets protrude, and the desecrations of France's most glorious tomb, which is to be perpetuated as a national monument, have taken place of clothing and accoutrements from the skeletons of the heroes.

Big Crop in Saskatchewan

Premier Martin, of Saskatchewan, says the crop in his province will be larger than was anticipated. "In Saskatchewan there will be a yield of 100,000,000 bushels and Manitoba will have as large a crop as last year, between 45,000,000 and 50,000,000 bushels."

A Busy Time

Lumber Yards Doing Big Business in Country Districts.

Healthy activity in building operations in the country is predicted by the manager of a lumber company just returned from a trip through a number of points in Alberta. All the country yards are fully stocked up, and this month will witness the beginning of some of the biggest business seen in the west for a considerable number of years.

In the districts where crops are good, and a big yield is now assured, this activity in the lumber business is particularly shown, and new barns, houses, and other improvements in the necessary equipment of the farm, will go up this fall. With this in view, lumber yards throughout the province are looking forward to a big fall business.

800 Acre Farm Sold

W. A. Leckwith, who came from Iowa, U.S.A., in 1905, has sold his 800 acre farm in Saskatchewan, including this season's crop, to a neighbor, W. A. Houghtaling, also a former Iowa who came to Canada in 1909, for $120,000. This represents a price of $150 per acre.

Simmons (continued) and shook his head. "I'll not quit," he growled.

"Well, you needn't. I have little for you now, but I'd have even less if you did that. Anyhow, I know who is behind this ill's Dalton."

"I didn't say it was."

"No, you didn't; nevertheless, know."

"You wouldn't handle Abe Dalton quite so easy as you did me," whined Simmons. "He's some man, is Dalton."

"That remains to be seen," smiled Dorkin. "I'll just say, much though I catch him up here on my Preserve, I'm going to find out just how much of a man he is. You tell him that for me."

He laughed at the baffled expression on the other's face. "Look here, Simmons," he said quickly. "Dalton hasn't got an answer, and you know it. He never takes any chances himself, but gets one of you fellows to take them for him. I've just given you what you deserve, but I'll tell you something. I respect you for the nerve you've shown. I don't want you to get in wrong in Dalton's account. Take my advice and break away from him. By the way, I'll trouble you to put that notice back where you found it. I've pointed to the card gleaming up from the moss, then strode away among the trees.

Thereafter the notices remained unheeded. Not that certain of the trappers, with a personal grievance against Dorkin for establishing a kingdom and a law unto himself, did not long usurp the fertile hunting and trapping grounds from which they were barred, but because they had learned thoroughly that Dorkin was quite capable of taking care of his own and had a way of keeping his promises.

Some of them, more reasonable than the others, even accepted the big woodman's overtures of friendship and came often to visit him at the cabin in the grove. His strong personality, his colossal physical strength, and his marvellous power over the wild things, won their respect, and in their rough way they liked him a great deal.

Dorkin had been in the Northern forest lands five years now, five wonderful, beautiful years of life, where life was fuller and grander.

Reminded by the sympathetic fingers of the great Mother, his physical life had become the very embodiment of perfect manhood which had about it the ruggedness of the oak, and the symmetry of the hickory. Nature had, indeed, been kind to him, and he loved her for it. In his heart he said to her throughout each glad day.

"You," you have saved me and I shall never stray away from you again."

He had never known the fulness of life before. He had thought life consisted of a struggle that was not easily attained, a reaching toward and above the clouds, for a bubble that danced above a stream, beyond the grasp of man. Now he knew that life was health and the power to taste and know and feel—particularly to feel. He had never known it before. He had been in the city—that grinding, pulsating place of crowds and war and smoke—where those men who directed the channels of learning, business, and finance, realized the artificialness of it all.

With him there was no longing to know more than what he saw and knew after his own fashion. Those white stars that hung low above the tree-topped open were simply glorious stars, made to blink out of the dusk, glow golden in the deepening shadow, and sing out in the night with a melody among with the eternal chord upon which hung all the harmony of his world.

So it was with the winds, the breeze, the stream, and all the storms of all the perfected parts of the world before he accepted them as he accepted the things of his environment, he felt above all, he lived. He was a primitive man with ruddy life in his veins, a great and beautiful love in his heart for his environment, and every morning, as he stood watching the lightning strike the east, his soul sang in wild prayer to an infinite something which he knew was God and God's.

Seldom, if ever, did he allow himself to think of the other world in which he had fought and failed and well-nigh gone down. At first he had found it hard to forget; the dread of past memories would prod him at times and spoil the golden web of peaceful dreams. That was because spiritual regeneration is slower than physical; because certain diseases can be cured only in the Great Operating Room.

Five years as keeper of the Retreat and he was happy, contented, successful. Five happy years. Dorkin smiled at the thought of how peaceful, how happy they had been. He hoped nothing would ever occur to bring the past back before him. He had just about outlived it, almost obliterated it from his mind—all save one little chapter that could not be forgotten, quite.

He could not forget the disgrace, the degradation he had suffered back there in the city, could not forget what, an innocent man, had endured for the crime of another. And then there was a face that came up and stood before his eyes whenever this memory forced itself upon him. Dorkin had had always associated his disgrace and this man together. He had always thought that Timberley was, some way, responsible for his passing out.

But today, as he walked through the spy glass, even that cloud seemed less sombre and something more vaguely indistinct than it had hitherto been. Perhaps it was because of the new spring-time warmth of the air; just get it any drug store to contain a small bottle of "Dandarine" for a few cents. It is a soft cloth with the "Dandarine" drawn through your hair, taking the dirt and scales out of the hair, instantly, yes, immediately, you have a mass of soft, lustrous and easy to do up. All dirt, dust and excess oil is removed.

Let Dandarine put more life, color, vigor, and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, make your hair grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

Down in a small lake he heard a glorious splashing and knew that the old link, whose den was deep in the bank, had taken her family of kittens out to a morning swim. Brought a big heech, close beside him, a cock growl clucked his challenge to the unwaring fox beneath him.

Dorkin stood still, a smile on his face, a deepening wonder in his breast. It was all so wonderful to him; each and every day it grew more wonderful. These things had come into his Retreat, wild, frantic, fearful things. What a difference to day! He drew in a long breath, he tasted the soil of budding tree and shooting plant. It was like the sweetest secret to him, and he laughed softly, for sheer joy of it all, as he passed on up the path to his cabin.

As he turned a corner of the path and came into the open, a big man dressed in grey tweeds, rose from his seat on an elm block and stood before him. "Standby, by God," the man muttered, his face nailing a trifle.

Dorkin passed, and a deep red mounted to his temples. He took a quick step forward, his hand on his sword hilt, but he saw that the man with his action the other man recoiled.

Big as he was, before Dorkin's giant frame he seemed diminutive.

"You," commented Dorkin, "You—" The growl choked in his throat, and the other man stepped back.

"Don't say it," he advised. "Not that I care; but if you say it you will violate the hospitality of this," he waved his hand about, "and I understand that would be an unpardonable thing to do, up here."

"Timberley, why are you here?" asked Dorkin, striving to keep his voice steady.

The other laughed shortly. "Suppose I say that in connection with this war! I have been actually solely through a feeling of friendship!"

Letter "E" Most Fortunate

Reasons Why We Could Not Do Without It

Someone has advanced the opinion that the letter "e" is the most unfortunate character in the English alphabet, because it is always out of cash, never in debt, never out of danger, and in hell all the time. But we call attention to the fact that "e" is never in war, and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease, and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life, no heaven. It is the centre of honesty, makes love perfect, and without it there would be no editors, devils or news.

In reference to the foregoing, a Calgarian remarks that "e" completely helps for man, for it was the beginning and end of Eve. It starts love's engagements and completes their marriage. It is the most fortunate, for it always comes in late and is always in time. It will make butter, better and put finish to the taste, and after all it has done, and is doing, it is just the beginning of the end.

Report of Movement OF 1919 Crops

Largest Part of Grain Moved By Lake Route.

In a report issued by the Dominion bureau of statistics, on the movement of last season's crop, it is shown that only 253,607 bushels went straight through to the east by rail, and 1,937,331 bushels were carried to the eastern part of the United States. As is always the case, the largest shipment out of the west went by way of the terminus, Port William and Port Arthur. During the crop year 1917, 97,467,240 bushels passed into the public and private elevators at these two ports of shipment.

Two main streams of wheat are shown as going into the United States. Of these 2,797,037 bushels went by way of Buffalo, and 1,167,959 bushels from other United States lake ports, and 19,037,331 bushels moved by rail from the eastern pool, while 184,109 bushels were cleared for consumption in the United States, and 4,964,096 bushels from the shipments to lake ports including Duluth.

No attempt is made to show by what ports this wheat moved out of the United States, but the movement was entirely from Atlantic ports. So far as exports are concerned, says the report, it is correct to conclude that this wheat was exported into other countries by way of United States ports.

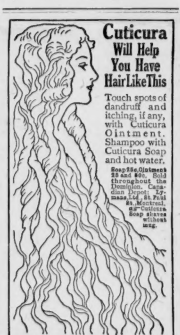

Canada's Coal Output

Estimates of Year's Production Are Disappointing.

According to latest reports coal production is not nearly up to expectations in Canada. The total production for the last calendar year of the Dominion was 14,550,000 tons below the maximum output of the Canadian mines, which was reached in 1913, figures that year being 15,012,178 tons.

The falling off in production is stated to be greater in Nova Scotia than in any other province in the Dominion. In 1913 Nova Scotia produced 8,000,000 tons, while in 1919 she produced only 5,700,000 tons.

Fliers Develop Far-Seeing Look

Hundred-Mile-an-Hour Face Never Looks Wary.

The "100-mile-an-hour face" has arrived! People who meet passengers by the air ferry at Paris say that these aerial voyagers breathe deeply, with wide-open eyes, as they set foot again on father earth. There is a sparkle in their expressions. Any trace of boredom or cynicism appears swept from their faces by the purity of the upper air.

When they take the auto which carries them to their hotel they have a look of plying impatience at the crawling vehicle. "Crossed the channel in ten minutes," they say, "and it's taking us more than that to get to the end of this street!"

The 100-mile-an-hour face doesn't wear an expression of weariness with the lines suggestive of mental strain. On the contrary the expression is one of steadfast composure, with the quiet far-seeing face of the man who sweeps wide vision.

Seamen have such an expression, but air observers say that flyers are likely to develop it to the nth degree.

Farmers to Keep Books

Will Have Record of All Expenditures and Receipts.

Twenty-five thousand Nebraska farmers have obtained copies of agriculture farm record books for the purpose of keeping books this year.

The farm record book provides for an accurate inventory of all lands, stock, implements, grain, feed, etc., and for a complete account of all expenditures and receipts. At the end of the year the farmer using the book will know his gross and net incomes, profits and losses on all kinds of stock, crops and other farming operations, and have a record of all expenditures and receipts of the year. Such a record will be of value not only for sentimental reasons but for determining income tax, as well as a complete record of all business for the year.

Moldy Silage

Using Plenty of Water at Feeding.

Surest Way to Avoid Difficulty.

More or less concern is regularly expressed by farmers over the fact that they find moldy spots in their silage. Some report that the losses from moldy silage amount to a good deal. Others express the opinion that moldy silage is poisonous to all classes of livestock. What are the facts?

There are several kinds of molds that appear in silage depending upon the conditions favoring their growth. The amount of mold invariably depends upon the way the silage is packed. Molds require air for their growth and if the corn is put in the silo when it is too mature or too dry the silage is not enough moist to pack it compactly, the air is not entirely excluded, hence molds grow and develop. Insufficient tramping also leaves air pockets which give the molds an opportunity to grow.

As far as known there is no conclusive evidence to show that moldy silage is fatally poisonous to all classes of livestock. It is true that sometimes causes digestive disturbances and there are good reasons to believe that it is frequently fatal to calves and sheep. Cattle, however, do not seem to be seriously affected by it. Nevertheless, the safest policy is to always discard moldy silage. Henry's and Morrison's Feeds and Feeding, says: "Spoiled, moldy silage should always be discarded, and special care taken to feed no such material to sheep or horses, which are so much more easily affected by it than cattle."

The use of plenty of water at silo filling time is one of the surest ways of avoiding difficulty from moldy silage. It has been found or has become overripe. If one has the facilities for running a steady stream of water over the silage and at the same time is careful to see that the tramping is thoroughly done, the loss from moldy silage can be made almost negligible.

A matter of fact, it is possible to entirely prevent the growth of molds if the corn is cut at the proper time and thoroughly tramped in. What air remains after this is done is used up in the fermentation processes which begin as soon as the silage is sealed—the oxygen being converted into carbonic acid gas and silage acid.

Those who have not already built silos should not be alarmed at the reports they may hear concerning moldy silage. Molds should be considered as something that can be prevented.

As a vernicle there is no preparation that equals Mother Gray's Worm Exterminator. It has saved the lives of countless children.

Perennial Hot Water

French Village Has No Use For Coal Or Wood.

With the price of coal unprecedentedly high and still soaring, one reads with envy of the French village of Chaudesaignes, in the Auvergne Mountains. It is built in the crater of an inactive volcano. A number of stone-covered walls furnish hot water, which flows through main beneath the rows of houses. Not a chimney is to be seen in the village, which is surrounded by snow-covered peaks from October to May. Neither stoves nor ranges nor boilers are to be found; neither coal nor wood nor any other kind of fuel is used there. But the houses are always warm, even when the temperature outside is below zero. In the floor of each house are several holes leading to the main pipes. To heat a house the covers of the holes are removed; to prepare a meal, a pot is lowered to the flow of boiling water; on washing day all that is necessary is to go to the large pool of hot water which flows freely just outside the village.

Care of Machinery

Implementers Kept in Repair Give More Satisfactory Service.

Do not merely go through the motion but shelter machinery considerably, and before doing so, first let the repair men have their say. An implement in repair at all times will have a longer life and will give more satisfactory service than one that is not receiving regular attention. Secondly, clean and oil each machine and give all polished surfaces an application of oil and anti-rust. Grease axle or other lubricant will answer the purpose.

FREQUENT HEADACHES

Lifeboats to Protect

The Shipwrecked

New Life Raft Supplied With Artificial Heat.

The drawback to most of the existing forms of lifeboats or life-saving rafts is that the occupants are exposed to wind and sea, being drenched with spray in bad weather and having no means of warming or drying themselves. The invention of a Hull man bids fair to overcome this danger, as in his life-raft shipwrecked are completely protected from the elements, and are plentifully supplied with air, and, if necessary, with artificial heat. Hilder's chief contribution has been to admit air into enclosed floating chambers while keeping out water in a rough sea, but this problem has been solved by an ingeniously contrived wire trap-door in the top of each chamber. In the cold raft it is proposed to make each tank eight feet square, giving accommodation for 25 persons, and provision for a wireless installation to be made, where this thought advisable. Ample room would be available for heating apparatus and for stores of food and drink.

HAS NO PAIN NOW!

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Peasey of London.

London, Ont.—"I suffered with periodical pain, and these facts will not only help me, but I can tell my friends, and I can tell the world that I am cured. I was in this condition for two or three years and I could not seem to get any relief. I tried all kinds of remedies and had been treated by physicians, but received no benefit. I found one of your booklets and felt inclined to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I received the best results from it, and now I keep house and go out to work like any other woman. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to all my friends, and these facts will help some poor woman use them as you have helped me. J. F. PEASEY, 200 Victoria Street, London, Ont.

The reason women write such letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. and tell their friends how they are helped is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness to so many women who were ill from their illness they want to pass the good word to those who are suffering with the same troubles and who may be helped.

If there are any complaints you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Iron Shutters Cause Riots

Protection For Shops In Near East Source Of Trouble.

Iron shutters have probably caused more riots, massacres and pogroms in the Near East than political agitators. All shops in the Near East are provided with rolling iron shutters which are worked in iron grooves. When they are banged down they make as much noise as a machine-gun. Every time there is rumor of any sort of trouble some timid merchant slams down his shutters to protect his plate glass. Without investigating the cause, other merchants follow instantly with such a clatter that the public becomes panicky and rushes about trying to discover the cause of the flurry.

At such moments, excited crowds will credit any rumor which is put into circulation. Picketeers avail themselves of such opportunities. Shopkeepers, street fakirs and vagabonds gather crowds by this device. In any Turkish city the circulation of a rumor that a movement was to be started against Christians would cause all the Armenians and Greeks to close within a few minutes, and frequently the noisy disorder of the shops takes the religious hatred of the Moslems into account.

Salmon Fisheries Satisfactory

"On the whole, the condition of the salmon fishery on the west coast is very satisfactory," said W. A. Fournier, assistant deputy minister of fisheries, who has recently returned to Ottawa after a prolonged inspection trip.

"The Fraser, while comparatively small, is considerably larger than was anticipated," he continued, "but this river can never be brought back to its maximum of productivity until some international agreement for its protection has been consummated."

Rural Schools Predominate

Seventy-five per cent. of Total Enrollment in Saskatchewan is in the Country.

In Saskatchewan about seventy-five per cent. of the total school enrollment is found in the village and rural schools. In addition, all the town schools contain a large rural element while our cities are not yet sufficiently large to be entirely removed from the influence of the rural environment. This predominance of rural school population has been kept in view when framing the various courses of the elementary curriculum. Agriculture is a subject of study for Grades VII and VIII. While it treats every phase of this important industry it is developed from the nature study point of view rather than as a science subject, the course being designed to be the crown or top stone of the nature study work of the previous grades. This method of treatment is advocated so as to keep the work definitely related to the environment of the pupil, and to permit of such modification of subject matter as will best meet local requirements. The practical working out of the course seems to indicate that the present method is quite satisfactory. Gardening and poultry hold the place of interest in many larger centres without in any way preventing the development of a full course, while throughout the country local interest colours the character of the work being attempted—Augustus H. Bell, M.A., LL.B., Deputy Minister of Education.

We have prepared for a Rush in Preserving Fruits for the beginning of next week, and by the middle of next week we hope to have Your Needs Supplied, as the Prices will begin to advance then.

A poet sings of many things, of love, joy and sorrow
His subtle art strikes the heart, like Cupid's darting arrow.
In all his fits he never hits on beans and things like those;
Only at times in all his rhymes mentions woman's clothes.
So it's up to me to climb a tree, and in low and humble style,
Try to tell of the goods we sell at the Burdett Mercantile.
Everything to eat which is Fresh and Sweet we have in grand array;
Prunes and Plums and chewing gums and other kinds of hay.
We're not behind in the proper kind of fruit that's grown to can.
Our goods sure go, for the price is low, within reach of every man.
You can save right now to buy a cow, or salt money down to keep,
By buying where we really dare to sell goods so very cheap.
When people know the place to go where values lead the rest,
They step right out without a doubt and buy the things that's best.
A knowing kid snaps the lid on fleeting nickles and odd dimes;
He's always flush in boom or rush, and sails serenely thro' hard times.
So take a tip and make a trip where values lead in classy style.
We've stood the test, and lead the rest at the Burdett Mercantile.

We have bought Plums and Peaches, to arrive early next week at a Very Special Price.
We intend to give Our Customers the benefit of this Good Buy, so order early as they will not last long. Only three cases will be sold to any one person, as we wish to treat all alike.
